Jewish Hospitals, Brandeis Seen Evincing Cultural Lag

ASBURY PARK, N. J. (JP)—Jewish hospitals and a Jewish-sponsored non-sectarian university like Brandeis are evidence of cultural lag, Rabbi Morris Lieberman of Baltimore told the 66th annual convention of the Central Conference of American Rabbis (Reform).

Lieberman questioned the validity of these institutions on their philosophy that Jews as Jews should support only those activities that have positive Jewish content. These activities of the community which are civic or general or non-Jewish in character should be abandoned, Lieberman asserted.

Referring to Brandeis university, Lieberman pointed out that it has clearly stated its non-sectarian basis.

"IN VIEW of its specific denial that it is a Jewish university and in the absence of any positive Jewish content or spirit, we must take grave exception to its promotion as a project of the Jewish community," Lieberman stated.

He also questioned the thesis on which Brandeis has based its appeal to the United States Jewish community, that "Jews, like other denominational groups should contribute to higher education in this country." He pointed out that the denominationally-founded schools all "were established for religious purposes, the training of ministers and missionaries.

"Efforts to maintain unnecessarily, or belatedly to initiate within the Jewish community, activities of non-Jewish nature are evidences of cultural lag which run counter to emerging patterns of American Jewish life. Their logical culmination is the re-creation in America of the European ghetto."

LIEBERMAN declared that assimilation is no longer to be feared in view of the resurgence of interest in things Jewish. He warned, however, that this "rebirth of Jewish feeling . . . may well occasion apprehension about assimilation's converse danger— isolation.

"This intense Jewish consciousness could conceivably result in segregation just as complete and undesirable as that produced by most virulent anti-Semitism," he said.

Lieberman opened his paper with the comment that the U. S. Jewish community is in "a period of transition which places great responsibility upon the community's leadership." He compared the European Jewish community to the American by describing the former as "a closed or total one" which forced the Jew to satisfy his full range of needs as a Jew.

"THIS NECESSITY for total organization," he asserted, "does not obtain in America."

He concluded that "the Jewish community of the U. S. must steadily redefine its area to retain only those activities which serve specific Jewish needs or which have positive Jewish content." He supported his view by referring to the Janowsky report of Jewish community centers which realigned their policies to specific Jewish content.

"As the community . . . gradually transfers its generalized functions to the larger society, then its institutions and leadership must increasingly be of a religious character," he said.

Lieberman emphasized that the return to the synagogue was not spiritual so much as structural, since the return was dictated by "the narrowing avenues of secularistic and nationalistic expression, leaving this as almost the only way of rearming Jewishness."

OPEN RABBINATE TO WOMEN TO SOLVE REFORM SHORTAGE, ADVOCATES RABBI BRICKNER

NEW YORK (JP)—Reconsideration of Judaism's historic stand against women rabbis was proposed this week by Rabbi Barnett R. Brickner as one possible answer to the present shortage of rabbis.

Rabbi Brickner made his suggestion in his presidential address to the Central Conference of American Rabbis' 66th annual convention.

Dr. Brickner's proposal followed close on the heels of a decision last month by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America approving the ordination of women as full ministers. Final ratification must await approval of the church's 256 local presbyteries.

A SIMILAR PLAN was advocated recently by the New York East Conference of the Methodist Church.

Dr. Brickner said that the Reform movement had in the past "pioneered" in the granting of equality to women. He pointed out that they not only sit on Reform boards, but soon one of the oldest Reform congregations will elect a woman as president.

His reference was to Mrs. Hugo Dalsheimer of Baltimore, a vice-president of the Baltimore Hebrew congregation and now in line for the presidency. She is president of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods.

DR. BRICKNER noted that women already were receiving degrees in religious education and added: "They have a special spiritual and emotional fitness to be rabbis, and I believe that many women would be attracted to this calling."

There is no ban in Reform Judaism on women appearing in the pulpit to take part in prayer services or even in delivering a sermon. At a recent convention of the Rabbinical Assembly, the association of Conservative rabbis, women were authorized to take part in leading the ritual, something that has long been a practice in Reform temples.

The Brickner proposal was supported by Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, another Reform leader and president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

IN HIS PROPOSAL for women rabbis, Rabbi Barnett Brickner referred to his earlier opposition to the same suggestion when it was considered by the Reform in 1922.

An interesting sidelight is that at that time, the question was not academic. Reform had before it a request for ordination from a woman student at Hebrew Union college.

The minutes of the 1922 consideration reveal that the request was from Martha Neumark, daughter of Rabbi David Neumark, a member of the faculty of HUC.

She is now Mrs. Henry Montor.

More Ceremony Among Reform Defended by Blank

ASBURY PARK, N. J. (JP)—The current trend in Reform Judaism in the direction of ceremony was defended here by Dr. Sheldon H. Blank, professor of Bible at the Hebrew Union college-Jewish Institute of Religion. Speaking to the Reform rabbis at their annual convention, he urged his hearers not to "lose perspective. The distance between Reform and a new, ceremonially oriented, Reform is only a fraction of the way from Reform to Orthodoxy."

Earlier, however, he quoted from the prophets and declared that he agreed that their repudiation of ceremonialism "was absolute and unconditional."

WASHINGTON (JP)—The United States and Israel were perceptibly moving closer this week to a long-sought Israeli objective—a mutual defense and security treaty.

The possibility that the United States might agree to such a pact was hinted at by Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. in his address to the Zionist Organization of America convention (see earlier story on another page).

Diplomatic sources told newsmen late last week that Israel had asked the United States for the mutual defense and security pact. Israel is said to consider this pact would offset the network of alliances between the Western powers and the Arab states, and thus lay the groundwork for a more stable arrangement in the Middle East.

GEORGE V. ALLEN, assistant secretary for South Asian, African and Near Eastern Affairs, is said to have discussed the Israeli proposal with Ambassador Abba Eban June 8.

The suggestion of such a pact was first publicly advanced by Prime Minister Moshe Sharett on June 1 in a Knesset debate on reports that Israel was engaged in negotiations that might culminate in a military alliance with the Western powers.

Sharett at that time confirmed reports that the possibilities of such an alliance were being explored, "first and foremost with the United States."

The three Western Foreign Ministers who met in New York last week are reported to have discussed the problems of Israel and the Near East. What they said, of course, has not been revealed as yet. But the effects of the discussion may be brought to light in the near future.

One stumbling block to such a pact that would need some smoothing out is Israel's desire that the supplying of arms to the Arab states by the U.S. cease. The U.S. is not expected to agree to this.

THE AMERICAN price for such an agreement also may prove a difficulty in reaching a satisfactory settlement. Rumor has it that the U.S. would ask for a base in the Negev and the use of Haifa as a free port for American and British military units.

According to The JEWISH CHRONICLE of London, the Jordan valley water plan recently proposed by Eric Johnston, Presidential envoy to the Middle East, is sure to be a part of any security pact.

Not too surprisingly, the Soviet Union is taking a dim view of any U. S.-Israel alliance. An article in the Moscow newspaper IZVESTIA warned Israel not to enter into any such agreement. It said that Russia would consider any pact a violation of assurance given to it by Jerusalem when Soviet-Israeli diplomatic relations were resumed in 1953.

NCRAC PROFFERS PEACE PIPE TO TWO DISAFFECTED BODIES

By ALAN KOHN
Jewish Post Correspondent

ATLANTIC CITY—Delegates to the 11th annual meeting of the National Community Relations Advisory Council held out the olive branch to the Anti-Defamation League and the American Jewish Committee, which left the organization two years ago.

The meeting reaffirmed its belief in the correctness of the NCRAC approach to community relations, however.

A statement of opposition to all forms of religious teaching in public schools, other than that regarding the role of religion in the history of mankind, was adopted.

Stress was also laid on the need to support full racial integration in the public schools, in the spirit of the recent Supreme Court decision, and the elimination of segregation in housing and other aspects of community life.

In a debate between Joseph Barr, national commander of the Jewish War Veterans, and Dr. Milton Konvitz of Cornell university, Barr said that the government should prevent anti-Semitism, while Professor Konvitz thought there was a threat to civil liberties in such action.

Bernard H. Trager was re-elected chairman of the Council.

Israel Exports Goods to Germany

TEL AVIV (JP)—The export of Israel-made goods to Germany, which had been strictly prohibited since the establishment of Israel, is now being permitted.

An official government source told The POST that a decision to permit such trade was adopted recently by the inter-ministerial committee for economic affairs.

A number of Israeli exporters have already gone to Germany to make arrangements for the marketing of Israel's goods, and for the strengthening of trade relations between the two countries. The proceeds, in German marks, will be used for the purchase of German products.

INDICATE VIEWS IN SURVEY

RABBIS DON'T EXPECT MUCH ALIYA FROM U.S. UNLESS CHANGE OCCURS

NEW YORK (JP) — Ninety-nine out of 101 rabbis polled recently believe that large-scale emigration from the United States to Israel will never take place, if there is no change in the economic, political and social status of the Jews here.

The survey was made by Eliezer Whartman of New York and reprinted from Jewish Social Studies Vol. XVII, No. 2, by the Conference on Jewish Relations. For his "Attitudes of American Rabbis on Zionism and Israel," Whartman mailed questionnaires to 300 rabbis whose names were selected at random from Orthodox, Conservative, and Reform lists.

Among the questions asked were queries about inter-relationships of the Jewries in America and Israel, the Israeli scene, the American scene, and personal attitudes. Of the 108 rabbis answering the queries, 51 had been to the Holy Land, and 57 had not; and 18 were Orthodox; 46, Conservative; and 44, Reform. Also, 41 were under 40 years of age, and 67 over 40.

SPECIFIC QUESTIONS asked include: Do you feel that 25 years from now Israel and American Jewry will be closer together, farther apart, or retain their present relationship? Do you feel that religious life in Israel today is satisfactory or unsatisfactory? Do you feel that the American scene is being neglected because of too much activity on behalf of Israel? And, if one of your children wanted to settle in Israel, would you object?

The Orthodox were most optimistic about prospects of rapprochement. Ten of them thought the two communities would draw closer together; two felt that communal activity on behalf of Israel was overemphasized; and three said Israel's needs had been slighted.

In the other two groups, on the other hand, 39 per cent of the Conservatives and 23 per cent of the Reform indicated that interest between the two countries would fall off; 37 per cent of Reform thought the American scene was being neglected; and 40 of the 44 Reform showed Israel also neglected. Of the 40 Conservatives, only four thought Israel neglected.

BEERSHEEBA — American tourists to Israel better watch out to whom they are condescending.

An American woman tourist stopped an Arab here a few days ago and asked if he would pose for a photograph. The Arab obliged.

After the picture was taken, the woman took an Israeli pound note from her handbag and offered it to her model.

Sheikh Suleiman el Husei peeled off several 5 Israeli pound notes from a wad which he took from his pocket, thrust them into the astounded woman photographer's hand, climbed into his Chrysler and drove off.

Viscount Samuel Quits Leadership Of Liberal Party

LONDON — Viscount Herbert L. Samuel, first British High Commissioner for Palestine, from 1920 to 1925, has resigned from the leadership of the Liberal Party in the House of Lords.

Lord Samuel, who is 84 and says he wants to devote more time to writing, held a number of cabinet posts before his appointment to Palestine and later served as chairman of the Council for German Jewry and of the Movement for the Care of Children Coming from Germany. At the outbreak of World War II, the latter group was responsible for the shelter of about 80,000 refugees from Germany.

As Liberal leader in the House of Lords, Viscount Samuel's personal authority was said to have far outweighed his party's numerical weakness. He was raised to the peerage in 1937, has been president of the Royal Institute of Philosophy since 1931, and has served as principal officer of the Royal Statistical society and Royal Asiatic society.

He plans to attend the House of Lords from time to time.

Cantors Find Experience Counts

NEW YORK — Cantors can now get credit toward bachelor of sacred music degrees on the basis of life experience, as well as by qualifying in course, according to the dean of the Hebrew Union School of Sacred Music in New York.

The new accreditation is part of a plan approved by the University of the State of New York by which candidates may qualify for the degree by passing faculty-administered examinations. Cantors equipped by life experience may apply directly for examination and obtain credit toward degrees in courses they pass. "Telescoped" courses and private tutoring may also give additional preparation where necessary.

One year of in-residence study will be required for a degree.

DATE PALMS CULTIVATED

JERUSALEM — In two years 67,000 date palm "suckers" recently imported from Iran and now being cultivated in a tree nursery at Ein Radian in the Arava are expected to be ready for permanent planting.

FUTURE CONNECTIONS between the two cultures were thought to rest mostly on community relations and Jewish art. Community relations was checked 76 times as the area in which American Jewry could make a distinct contribution to the cultural and social life of Israel; and Jewish art was checked 89 times as the field in which Israel can contribute to the culture and social life of American Jewry. Also, 72 rabbis, equally drawn from all groups, expressed confidence in Israel's ability to contribute to American Jewish life with Jewish literature.

Present interest in Israel was shown by 52 out of 102 rabbis as having increased since 1945 when the state was established. Thirty-two took the opposite point of view.

Prospects of U.S.-Israel Pact Cheers Happy ZOA Delegates

WASHINGTON, D. C. (JP)—The most successful Zionist Organization of America convention in years heard demands and half-promises for a mutual defense treaty between the U. S. and Israel and saw the foundations laid for the election next year of a new administration.

The firm hand of Jacques Torczyner, a national vice-president, controlled the behind-the-scenes activity, and indicated who may succeed Mortimer May next year. May was re-elected for his second term following the tradition of two successive years in office for each president.

Why this convention was so overwhelmingly successful no one seems to be able to answer. Up until a day before the convention, a maximum of 400 delegates was hoped for, but not expected. In no time, however, the rooms at the Willard hotel were sold out, and as delegates from all parts of the nation arrived, an enthusiasm absent from the last two or three conventions seemed to seize the delegates.

THE DEMANDS for a mutual defense treaty between Israel and the U. S. were heard from every speaker, and naturally were embodied in the resolutions adopted. But the half-promise came from an unexpected source, as Herbert Brownell Jr., Attorney General of the U. S., brought forth the most clear-cut statements from an Eisenhower administration man the U.S. Zionists have been able to get.

Referring to the pact on atomic energy just signed between the U. S. and Israel, Brownell asserted his "firm belief" that this would "not be the last pact soon to be signed between the two communities." This was as close to a commitment from a cabinet officer of the U.S. on Israel's diplomatic hope for a way out of its political isolation as has ever been received.

The hand of the Torczyner forces was clearly visible in the wrangling in the nominations committee. At one point, when Emanuel Neumann asked to be relieved of his post as chairman of the all-important national executive committee, a delegation from the nominations committee which NEUMANN sought to persuade him to change his mind, went armed with the information that Torczyner, New York diamond merchant, would be the choice of the committee to succeed him.

Neumann, smarting from his failure to bring the old Progressive group back into active work in the administration, reconsidered, and accepted the chairmanship. Torczyner was then selected out of the 17 vice-presidencies for a special vice-presidency along with Abe Goodman.

Goodman was named chairman of the inner committee, and Torczyner vice-chairman of the committee. These are newly designated titles, and were especially chosen in order to elevate the pair out of the list of ordinary vice-presidencies.

TORCZYNER'S FORCES controlled the all-important nominating committee. Rabbi Max Nussbaum was named associate chairman, along with Herman Weisman, of the national executive committee. An unexpected candidate to be elected to a top office was Maxwell Abbell, who at the wishes of Neumann, was named an associate chairman of the national administrative committee. Dr. Harris Levine, Jewish National Fund chairman, was re-elected.

The show of force by the Torczyner group reflects the hard political work of the New York Zionist leader who has his eye on the presidency. The possible opposition to him, in addition to Abe Goodman, are Weisman and Dr. Levine. This year, for the first time, the basic groundwork Torczyner has been laying over the past years showed clearly, however.

Goodman's supporters sought to have him named first vice-president. The move was rejected. It might have set up a sort of succession that would have meant his elevation to the presidency.

IN HIS ADDRESS on the opening night of the convention, Dr.

Abba Hillel Silver, titular leader of the ZOA, made an indirect attack on the leadership of the United Jewish Appeal and the Israel Bond sale when he hammered away at the issue which has become a perennial, the divorce of the ZOA from fundraising. He termed the leadership of the UJA and the Bond drive "non-Zionists."

Silver also hit the dominant attitude of many Israel leaders when he asserted that the American Zionist movement "cannot function properly if it is not vested with authority and prestige, if it is constantly sidetracked by those who should jealously safeguard its central position and who should work with it and through it."

The ZOA reported a larger membership than last year, the first year that the downward trend has been arrested. The downward trend in finances was also reversed, the delegates were told.

Argentine Strife Causes Concern

NEW YORK (WNS)—The possible repercussions of the revolt against Peron on the estimated 400,000 Jews in Argentina was holding the attention of Jewish leadership in America as fighting broke out in Buenos Aires, a city with a concentration of Jews estimated at 300,000.

With communications severed as a result of the tension, there was no way of determining whether there were any casualties among Jews, many of them living in the area attacked by rebel planes. The 100,000 Jews living outside of Buenos Aires are scattered over 100 different communities throughout the provinces.

(From Buenos Aires it was reported that regret over the bombing of the Israeli embassy during the disturbances last Sunday was voiced by the Argentine Foreign Ministry in a personal call made by one of its high officials to the Israeli embassy. Damage to the embassy's building was negligible.)

BOWDOIN COLLEGE SPEAKER HITS FRATERNITY BIAS HARD

BRUNSWICK, Me. (JP)—Fraternity bias was attacked here by a graduation speaker during the annual Bowdoin college commencement.

As is customary, the only speeches at the exercises were by members of the graduating class.

The attack on discrimination was made by G. Curtis Webber II of Auburn, son of a Maine Superior court justice. Speaking on "A Crack in the Icy Wall," he declared that "to cling to the outmoded concepts of racial superiority is to endorse sterile conservatism, which has no place on a campus where young men's minds are to be trained in an atmosphere where freedom of thinking is encouraged."

He urged that the college administration should require its fraternities to clear themselves of all discriminatory provisions in their charters by some future date—say within three years.

"The College has a responsibility to its students," he said, "not to be gainsaid by the petty dicta of the national fraternities, to educate its students for living in a world in which people are judged more and more on their individual merits, not lumped together into arbitrary general categories of black and white, Christian and non-Christian."

Webber suggested a time limit so as to allow all affected local chapters to make a determined effort to secure autonomy from their national headquarters. Failing this, they would have ample time to make the necessary arrangements with alumni to continue operations on a local basis or possibly to affiliate with another, more liberal national fraternity.

He also said that it was the college itself, rather than the fraternities, that should originate the action. He asserted, however, that the hands of the students are tied "by obdurate alumni members who refuse to allow any sort of change in their fraternity."

New Translation Of Book of Amos To Make Debut

WASHINGTON, D.C.—A new English translation of the Book of Amos, one of the first books prepared by Dr. Harry M. Orlinsky of Hebrew Union college—Jewish Institute of Religion in his new translation of the Bible, will get its first public reading at Camp B'nai B'rith, Starlight, Pa., it has been announced.

The new Bible will be based on the Masoretic text and will incorporate the latest historical, philological, and archaeological findings. It is expected to take five years to complete and will be published by the Jewish Publication Society of America, after review by an advisory board of eminent Jewish scholars.

Altogether this year, there will be 30 B'nai B'rith Institutes of Judaism. Eight of them are planned for Camp Starlight.

Rabbinical Alliance Holds Convention

NEW YORK (JP)—More than 400 Orthodox rabbis are expected to attend the convention of the Rabbinical Alliance of America June 28-29, in Spring Valley, New York.

The gathering will discuss the problems of kashrut, Torah education, Sabbath observance, ritual purity, Orthodox ritual and worship and other questions arising continuously during the year.

THE POST is used for current events in hundreds of religious schools throughout the U. S.

Los Angeles City Council Nixes FEPC

LOS ANGELES (JP)—The city council last week rejected 87 the enactment of an ordinance creating a Fair Employment Practices Commission to prohibit discrimination in employment because of race, color, religion or ancestry.

Opposing the measure were the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, Californians for Americans, and others. A letter from Carl P. Miller, Chamber of Commerce head, expressed fear that many firms might move out of the city if an FEPC were enacted locally, because of the threat of baseless litigation and harassment of business.

Some who spoke in favor of the measure were representatives of the Urban League, CIO, Democratic State Central Committee, and the Central Labor Council.

Those Cultured Israelis
Don't Like Umps, Either

By GEORGE VASS

YEARS AGO a pretty large hunk of umpiring in the Southern Association was in charge of a leather-lunged gentleman who bore the rather singular titulus of Steamboat Jones.

Steamboat — who apparently acquired his nickname from his habit of blowing off steam at rude young baseball players — was famed for more than his Solomon-like decisions on the field of battle. He had something on his head as well as in it.

Startled observers have recounted that when Steamboat would doff his skimmer, the sight was fearful to behold. The Jones dome was decorated in great profusion by lumps and scars of prodigious size and unbelievable coloration.

EACH INDENTATION, protuberance and laceration represented a token of the lack of esteem some fan had held Steamboat in. The poor ump had been skulled through the years by more pop bottles than a Sunday school class can guzzle at an all-day picnic.

All this was brought to mind the other day when the news came from Israel of the maltreatment of a gentleman who probably is a soul-mate in suffering of old Steamboat Jones.

It seems that a Tel Aviv and a Jerusalem soccer team were having a pretty tight set to in the YMCA stadium in Tel Aviv. With the home team in the lead 3-0 at half time, the referee disallowed a fourth goal by the Tel Avivers.

THE BOYS kept kicking the ball around, and with one thing and another it wasn't too long before Jerusalem caught up. Several times the Tel Aviv lads stubbed their toes on decisions by the ref. When the final whistle blew the game ended in a tie.

The crowd rushed onto the field with bottles ready and naughty words heating the already-warm spring air. For a moment it looked as if it were all up with one Israeli ref. Fortunately, before they could thump his noggin to the Steamboat Jones pattern the gendarmie rushed into the crowd enabling one scared arbiter to take off like a bat out of — an eave.

We've heard it said they take their culture seriously in Israel. But, apparently, they also take their sports with more than passive interest.

THE GENTLE art of skewering an unfriend has been abandoned most everywhere (more's the pity) but apparently Brandeis university lads and lassies will get a chance to learn how it's done. What's more, their instructor is definitely no gentleman. No, she's a lady!

Mrs. Lisel Oppenheim will join Athletic Director Benny Friedman's staff this fall as fencing instructor. Foil fans can be assured that Mrs. Oppenheim can parry with the best of 'em. She was listed as one of the 10 tops in the country in 1942 by the World Almanac.

SPORTS SHORTS — Robert Cohen, French-Algerian bantam-weight champion of the world, is resuming training now that injuries received in an automobile accident last winter have healed. . . . Bill McKenna, Brandeis' big Little All-America end, has been signed by the Calgary Stampers in the Western Canadian Professional football league. . . . One good reason for Cleveland's disappointing showing so far this season has been Al Rosen, the slugging third baseman, whose .246 batting average indicates somebody drilled a hole through his bat.

Ben-Gurion Curbs Officers With Non-Israel Names

TEL AVIV—No Israel army officer may hereafter represent Israel abroad unless he has a Hebrew name, according to orders issued by Defense Minister David Ben-Gurion.

The order was issued after an officer named Vishnevsky commanded an Israeli warship on a goodwill mission to South Africa and caused many South African Jews to feel, Ben-Gurion said, "regret and even shame over the Slavic name of the ship's commander."

AJ COMMITTEE SURVEY DISCLOSES—

NUMBER OF U. S. JEWS INTENDING TO MOVE TO ISRAEL FOUND SMALL

LONDON — The number of American Jews wanting to go to Israel is "negligible" according to a survey by the American Jewish Committee.

A vast majority of American Jews were reported as wanting to maintain their identity as Jews and Americans.

The first results of AJ Committee's study in a typical smaller Jewish community on the Eastern Seaboard of the United States were disclosed to the consultative conference of Jewish organizations, which met here last week.

The survey showed that 95 per cent, including both parents and adolescents, desired to continue as a "distinct" Jewish group. Dr. John Slawson, executive vice-president of the AJ Committee, told the conference.

He also said that when asked to suppose they could be reborn and to state whether they would prefer to be Jews or non-Jews, approximately 85 per cent replied they would prefer to be Jews.

DR. SLAWSON said that the survey disclosed "widespread opposition to intermarriage."

The AJ Committee executive said that although those questioned held a "warm and affirmative" feeling toward Israel and a sense of kinship toward Jews the world over, most of them "see their own future and the future of their children inextricably interwoven with the future of America."

"They feel themselves as integral parts of America and its institutions," he added.

Other speakers discussed the problem of anti-Semitism in the United States and the rest of the world.

IRVING M. ENGEL, president of the AJ Committee, reported that anti-Semites in the United States and Western Europe had taken to infiltrating civic veteran, political and pseudo-patriotic and other groups. They no longer dared to carry out their hate campaigns openly.

Ely M. Aron told the conference that the current anti-Semitic propaganda line was to equate Jews with communism. Some anti-Semitism hid behind the mask of pro-Arab propaganda, he added.

Prof. Isaiah Berlin of All Souls college, Oxford university, aroused some controversy with the prediction that the existence of Israel as a state would help speed the integration of Jews in other parts of the world.

HE SAID the "image of the Jew" held by other peoples had in the past been of "homeless wanderers, civilized but superfluous," but that it would now change to a more "healthy and normal" picture.

Professor Berlin thought this would eventually weaken the bonds between Israel's citizens and Jews elsewhere, because the former "now have the boundaries of a sovereign state; they

Labor Zionist Organ
Berates AJ Committee

by Rabbi Samuel M. Silver

A sharp attack on the American Jewish Committee is contained in an editorial in The KEMPFER, Labor Zionist organ. The periodical charges that the chief purpose of the recently concluded London meetings of a group calling itself the Consultative Conference of Jewish Organizations was to undermine the efforts of the World Jewish Congress to co-ordinate the affairs of Jewish organizations in a number of nations.

They Say

Anita Libman Lebeson, American Jewish historian:

"It is true that in the fields of science, medicine, engineering (American) Jews have made magnificent contributions. But they have not produced the spokesmen of conscience. There are no minor or major prophets among the living today."

U Nu, Socialist-Buddhist premier of Burma who recently toured Israel:

"For many years I supported the Arab stand regarding Palestine. Until one day a certain book (the Bible) happened to fall into my hands. I read it and came to the conclusion that the Jews were right, and that the country belonged to them."

Sephardi Chief's
Election Voided

TEL AVIV—The High Court in Jerusalem has found that the election of Sephardi Chief Rabbi of Israel Nissim Rahamin did not conform to the law.

By an oversight, Rabbi Nissim's name was omitted from the list of persons eligible for election to the Rabbinical Council, from among whose members the chief rabbi is chosen.

Justice Minister Pinhas Rosen said after the verdict that he would attempt to get the Knesset to legalize the election and validate all judgments delivered by Rabbi Nissim in the Rabbinical Court.

feel different from Jews living among non-Jews."

There were some protests at the idea that Israel might grow apart from the Jews of the dispersal. Gershon Avner, counselor of the Israeli Embassy here, said Israel would consider it a "dangerous" development.

The Committee, writes the Kempfer, would ordinarily keep aloof from other organizations, as it does from the NCRAC, but it must engage in some international work to back up its claims for recognition from the UN as an affiliated non-governmental agency. Instead of co-operating with the Congress, it creates a parallel organization, writes the Kempfer, one that will create duplication and confusion. All this is being done with welfare monies, the editorial asserts, and ought to evoke a protest from American Jews.

In a highly laudatory paragraph, the Kempfer cites the many solid achievements of the Committee. Then it goes on to deplore its "destructive and disruptive" moves, and refers to the Committee as the "yach-senta," among Jewish organizations, a term somewhat comparable to "snob," or "prima donna." To undermine positive achievements on the world stage, this even the yach-senta should not be allowed to do! concludes the editorial.

Malan Reassures
Jews On Status

CAPETOWN (WNS) — Daniel F. Malan, former premier, told a Jewish delegation he received at his home in adjacent Stellenbosch that "there is no such thing as a Jewish question in South Africa."

The delegation came to present Malan with a certificate of his inscription in the Jewish National Fund's Golden Book.

Dr. Malan said Jews had made "remarkable contributions" to the welfare of the country and have been "a powerful influence" for "mutual respect and goodwill fundamental to the national unity" of South Africa.

NON-OBJECTIVE ABSTRACTIONIST

South African Sculptor Says His Work Inspired by Bible

By JEROME L. MILLER
Jewish Post Correspondent

NEW YORK.

The creative genius of a Jewish sculptor was utilized recently at the United Nations "to add atmosphere" to the celebration of Union of South Africa day.

The sculptor, Rene Shapshak, who describes himself as a "non-objective abstractionist," is a well-known personality in South African art circles. Exactly one month after his arrival from Johannesburg, Shapshak was invited to exhibit some of his modern creations at the South African commemoration.

Shapshak, in his Chelsea hotel studio, told The POST that many of his artistic achievements were inspired by the Bible. In fact he has just completed a piece called the "Rebirth of Israel."

A FEW YEARS ago he wanted to "reproduce Israel's chief rabbi Herzog in clay," but yielding to Herzog's traditional distaste for statuary Shapshak "painted him in oils."

He recounted the incident of sculpting a bust of England's chief rabbi, Israel Brodie. It took Shapshak one hour to complete the clay bust, and during that time, Rabbi Brodie was studying the Mishna. When the sculptor finished, Rabbi Brodie expressed amazement at the artist's speed.

Shapshak is not a Zionist. "I don't affiliate myself with any political movement. I am only interested in culture," Shapshak says. Culture, he feels, is "a continual reproduction of mind and matter to enlarge it for the benefit of the individual and society."

SHAPSHAK went to South Africa after serving a turbulent apprenticeship with the famous Ecole de Paris. No school in the ordinary sense of the word, the name was given to the group including Picasso, Leger and Chagall which broke with representational tradition in favor of abstractionism and the search for the new form.

Although claiming to be against "literary" content in art, the group did more theorizing and manifesto-writing than artists had ever done in the past. Shapshak was one of the youngest of the Ecole. He broke with abstractionism in the mid-1930's in favor of a stylized classical form, but returned to abstract work some six years later.

"NEW MATERIALS have given the artist new scope and there can be no going back, only advancement," he says.

"The modern artist," he explains, "must be as inventive as any scientist, and he derives his material from modern life."

All of Shapshak's works seem contented. He says that this stems from his credo that "every morning is a new day of creation for me."

Mrs. Shapshak and their 12-year-old son Paul will join the artist in September. Paul is scheduled to perform a violin solo at the University of Witwatersrand's music festival this month.

Mapai, General Zionists
Will Form Coalition

By CARL ALPERT

HAIFA — On July 26 of this year well over a million Israelis will go to the polls for the third national elections since the creation of the state. At the first general elections in 1949 there were 440,000 voters, and in 1951 the number rose to almost 700,000. The additional increase since then constitutes the great question mark, and political commentators are already feverishly speculating on the possible outcome. Upon the results of these elections, less than two months away, hinges the future composition of the government.

Last month the country underwent a limited but crucial national poll which, many observers feel, may serve as an eloquent weather vane, and the political leaders are analyzing the results, as usual coming up with varying and conflicting findings. Serving in the nature of a straw, though certainly not representative poll, were the elections of delegates to the Eighth Conference of the Histadrut, the General Federation of Labor in Israel. Obviously, since only labor elements participated in this election, the results could not serve as conclusive for the August national elections, but certain trends in the ranks of the 400,000 Histadrut voters, more than a third of the nation's total, do have considerable significance.

THE DOMINANT political party in the Histadrut, as in the government, is Mapai, the Socialist party headed by Ben-Gurion and Sharett. However, whereas in the Histadrut the Mapai commands a clear and dominant majority, in the government it polled only 37 per cent of the votes cast and must rely on a coalition of partners. What will be Mapai's strength in August? In this respect the Histadrut poll is not at first revealing, for the 57.74 per cent polled by Mapai last month compares with 57.06 per cent which they received in the last previous Histadrut election in 1949. Failure of the Mapai to increase its lead within the Union, many feel, points to a definite decline in its national strength in view of the changes in other parties.

In second place in the Histadrut is the group to the left of Mapai. In 1949, under the name of Mapam, this group polled an impressive 34.3 per cent. Today, split into two dissident factions, Mapam and Ahdut Ha-Avodah, the total received has been only 27.15 per cent. There is no doubt of what this means. The influence of extreme leftism within the Histadrut is definitely on the wane, and if this is the trend within the labor union, the trend on the national scene will be all the more marked. The severe loss suffered by the Mapam is not compensated for by the slight gain of the Communists (4.09 per cent against 2.63 per cent) since the latter is for the most part due to a large accretion of Arab Communist members in the past half-dozen years.

BUT IF THE extreme left lost around 7 per cent, and Mapai remained constant, where did

IT'S THE TRUTH!

(Copyright, 1955, by Samuel Deutsch)

THE HEBREW names for the Hebrew months in the Hebrew calendar are not Hebrew at all! They were derived from the language of the Babylonians!

ALTHOUGH Massachusetts, in its early history, offered complete freedom for the Puritans, the same freedom was not granted to Catholics, Quakers, and Jews!

PAWNSHOPS in Spain frequently use the Star of David as a symbol of their trade!

those missing voters go? The answer is to be found in a study of the figures on the right wing. If the 7 per cent of missing leftists moved right into Mapai ranks, it appears that an almost similar percentage of previous Mapai voters also moved to the right into other, more conservative parties. For the first time a General Zionist Workers party made its appearance on the Histadrut lists, and polled 3.81 per cent against nothing in 1949.

General Zionism, this new workers' group proclaimed, is not an anti-labor party; it is a party of specific economic principles regarding free initiative and has its economic views on taxation, currency and employment, in addition to a foreign policy platform. Such a program can also command the support of thinking labor people, they said, and their debut in the Histadrut has been nothing short of spectacular.

AT THE SAME TIME the HaOved HaZioni party, which in the national elections parades under the flag of the Progressives, politically between Mapai and the General Zionists, also increased its position from 3.76 per cent to 5.25 per cent. This gain, too, was obviously at the expense of the Mapai. The only rightist group which suffered a mild setback was the religious group, 1.96 per cent against 2.12 per cent six years ago. Numerically the change is small, but many feel that it heralds the beginning of the decline of religion as a factor in Israel's politics. The religious Jew may vote for a Socialist party or for a conservative party, but increasingly, it is felt, there is no place for a political party whose major raison d'être is religion per se.

Prophecy is a dangerous business at best, but on the basis of my own observations I would at this time venture the following: The elections in Israel will give no one party an absolute majority, thus necessitating again the formation of a coalition government. I believe that the Mapai and the General Zionists will between them obtain a sufficiently large majority of the seats in the Knesset as to enable them to form a comfortable two-party coalition, though it is very likely that at least one other small party will be taken into the partnership on sufferance.

NEW YORK

Great Cause Becomes A Laughing Stock

by M. Z. FRANK

According to a cable in the New York TIMES of June 16, David Ben-Gurion feels incensed and says Jews in South Africa feel incensed that a man by the Slavic name of Vishnevsky should have represented Israel abroad on an official mission. Vishnevsky was in charge of the S. S. Misgav which made a good will tour of the East and South Africa coasts and was especially well received by the Jewish communities of Capetown and Elizabeth.

BEN-GURION

Well, well. Mr. Vishnevsky will have to change his name.

I hesitate to encroach on Mr. Pearlroth's territory, and I hope he will correct me on any of my wrong guesses. He does research in that field. I am just a dilettante. So, as I diletante, I venture the guess that the name Vishnevsky is derived from the Russian word vishnia which means a cherry. Whether Mr. V.'s great grandfather sold cherries or came from a place called Vishnevsk where cherries must have abounded, I leave to Mr. Pearlroth. But Mr. Vishnevsky, in accordance with the custom prevalent in Israel, can either translate his name into Duvdevani, or adopt a name which sounds like Vishnevsky. I suggest Vashti. If Herman could be Harman, and Shertok could be Sharett and Green could be Ben-Gurion, why not Vashti for Vishnevsky?

OF COURSE, Mr. Ben-Gurion might object. Vashti is not a Jewish name. It was borne by a Persian woman, the first queen of King Ahasuerus, and is not, strictly speaking, Hebrew. So what? Isn't Esther a Persian name? Yet no one would object to a man calling himself Ben-Esther! Besides, the name Vashti connotes a certain amount of outside coercion—as the King ordered his queen Vashti to appear before his guests at the feast to show off her beauty. And I think Captain Vishnevsky, whatever Hebrew name he may adopt, will do so under coercion. So I vote for Captain Vashti!

The government of Israel has no direct legal power over the names of its citizens. Not only plain citizens, but even leaders of the Government and of the Knesset have managed to escape the Hebraization epidemic with their foreign names intact. Eliezer Kaplan died with a Latin name (derived from the same root as "chaplain" meaning a Cohen, Mr. Pearlroth?)

Joseph Sprinzak sticks to his Diaporic name, which sounds Ukrainian, at least, by its ending, and which, in my guess, is derived from the feminine Yiddish name Shprintza, which—it is only by guess—stems from the Spanish "Esperanza"—hope, probably introduced into Ashkenazi communities by Sephardi refugees. (Right, Mr. Pearlroth?) I have long been of the opinion that the speaker of the Knesset should translate his name into Hatikvah—or Tohelet, or Mikveh-Israel, or any adjectival derivatives thereof which may sound sweet to his ears. But the speaker of the Knesset insists on violating the esthetic Hebrew ear of some people, and remains Sprinzak (pronounced Shprintzak).

Sharett, formerly Shertok, took a long time to think up a proper Hebrew name for himself—long after the State was declared. It seemed at the time that all Israel partook in the deliberations. Shertok is merely a convenient Hebrew spelling for Tchertok (there is no Tech in Hebrew, but there is an sh) Tchertok or Chertok in Russian means a little devil. He finally struck upon the happy idea of retaining the first three letters of the name Shertok and changing the vowel to read Sharett, which means "Service" or "Ministration."

IT PUTS YOU in mind—if you ever "davened" or heard your old man "daven"—of "The angels of ministration" or "The ministering angels" whom your old man welcomed on a merry song every Friday night. (Shalom aleichem mal' achi hasharett.) Abe Herman changed his name to Harman, which only sounds like Herman but means Mountmanna. The writer Itzhak Shenberg changed his Shenhart—from Beautiful Mountain to Mountain Tooth or Mountain Ivory.

Well, it was very nice when Jews in Palestine changed their names before there was a State, without compulsion. That was the way Lazar Perlman became Eliezer Ben-Yehuda in 1822; Itzhak Shimshelevitch became Itzhak Ben-Zvi in 1909; David Green became David Ben-Gurion about the same time, etc.

But there is nothing inspiring in the epidemic that got hold of the Jews in Israel right after the State came into being in 1948 to change their names. And it is even less inspiring when the ministry of foreign affairs and the ministry of defense withhold a job or a diplomatic assignment from an otherwise deserving official until he Hebraizes his name. A great cause thus becomes a laughing stock.

The cherry-blossom viewer in Washington, D. C., may also want to view the Gompers Memorial, N.W. corner of 10th St. and Massachusetts Ave. N.W. The monument memorializes Samuel Gompers, the English-born Jew who was one of the founders and for nearly 40 years the president of the American Federation of Labor. Of bronze and marble, it shows Gompers seated in front of several allegorical figures representing Unionism, Fraternity and Brotherhood.

Gompers fought and helped win the battle against sweatshops and starvation wages, led the struggle for the eight-hour day and union recognition, succeeded in having the company union outlawed and defeated the first Communist attempt to capture the American labor movement. During World War I he served on the Council of National Defense. When he died, in 1924, the A. F. of L. had five million members.

The visitor will, of course, also want to see sites of general interest such as the Capitol, Thomas Jefferson Memorial, Library of Congress, National Archives, National (Mellon) Gallery of Art, Pan-American Union, Smithsonian Institution, Washington Monument, Supreme Court Building, War College, and the buildings of the Treasury Department, State Department, Post Office Department, Interior Department, Federal Reserve, Bureau of Printing and Engraving and Department of Agriculture. In each of these places there are also items of Jewish interest.

Bombing Held
Publicity Stunt

TEL AVIV (JP)—Two Israeli newspapers have voiced the suspicion that a bomb which recently exploded in a local printing establishment where the sensational illustrated weekly HAOLAM HAZER is produced was planted as a publicity gag by the publication's editor.

The Mapai organ DAVAR, while denouncing the bombing outrage as a violation of the concepts of a free press, thought it curious in an editorial that the editor of the anti-Mapai weekly did not hesitate to remove the explosives himself, and to put them on his own desk. MAARIV also wondered if the bombing was not just a stunt.

Police were unable to find any clues as to the perpetrators, and announced a 5,000 Israel pounds reward for information.

HAOLAM HAZEH has been strongly anti-Mapai recently and has carried a series of sensational "revelations" of "gangsterism in the Haifa municipality." Mayor of Haifa is Abba Hushi, a member of Mapai.

Probe Urged
Of Dropping
Of Arab Speaker

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (WNS) A demand for a state investigation of the circumstances which allegedly led to the dropping by the Westchester Youn Women's Republican Club of an Arab speaker who was to address the club's annual convention last month was made this week on Attorney General Jacob Javits by Alfred M. Lillenthal, former official of the American Council for Judaism.

Lillenthal claimed that Omar Khadra, of the Saudi Arabian delegation to the United Nations, had been dropped as a speaker as results of "threats" and he called on the Attorney General to investigate the source of this threat to freedom of speech. Miss Margaret Calnan, vice-president of the club, denied there had been any threats by any organization to picket the meeting.

Other club spokesmen were reported to have said the Khadra was dropped because it was feared by the club it would come under severe criticism if it failed to give both sides a hearing on a controversial subject. When Khadra subsequently was invited to address the White Plains Rotary Club he cautioned his audience against what he called Zionist attempts to restrict freedom of speech in this country.

FRUITS, BERRIES, MELONS MAKE JUNE LOVELY MONTH FOR ALL

By SARAH LIEBER

It would be a difficult, if not impossible thing to decide which of all the magnificent fruits is best. Fortunately, we needn't limit ourselves. And this is the month when small fruits, berries and melons are spread out before us. In rapid succession, their seasons come. Now strawberries are at their best, but already the delicate flavored blueberries and raspberries are coming into the market. Thanks to the shippers we don't have to wait for local seasons for the cherries, apricots and plums which are beginning to come in. With some of these, and some melons on hand, the balabosta is prepared for a variety of luscious and decorative desserts and salads.

And there are never any problems with leftovers. Such fruits as remain may be combined with others, even canned or frozen for a mixed fruit cup. Or folded into pudding, or gelatin dessert. Or baked in a pie or cake. And smetana seems made for combination with fruit. But have you tried yogurt instead? Or whipped dried skim milk powder? Or for a fleishig meal, an egg white meringue? And for a very dressy company dessert, a scooped-out canteloupe filled with sherbet or ices. You may make the melon shell extra attractive by scalloping the edges or leaving enough of the shell to form a basket handle.

STRAWBERRY CHARLOTTE

- 1 package strawberry gelatin
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1½ cup crushed strawberries
- juice of ½ lemon
- 1 cup heavy cream, whipped
- lady fingers or slices of sponge cake

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Cool until thick but not set. Stir in juice and berries. Chill until almost set. Then fold in whipped cream. Arrange cake around the sides of a mold or pan. Fill mold with gelatin mixture. Chill until solid. Unmold, and garnish with whole berries, whipped cream or custard sauce. Serves six.

BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

- 2 cups sifted flour
- 3 tps. baking powder
- ½ tsp. salt
- 2 tbsps. sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 cup milk
- 3 tbsps. oil or melted shortening
- 1 cup blueberries

Sift together all dry ingredients. Beat egg into milk. Add liquids to flour mixture, stirring just enough to moisten. Add shortening. Dredge berries with a little flour and fold into mixture. Drop batter by spoonful into greased muffin pans, filling ¾ full. Bake at 425 degrees about 20 minutes until lightly browned.

FRESH FRUIT FLOATING ISLAND

- ½ cup sugar
- 2 tps. cornstarch
- ¼ tsp. salt
- 3 egg yolks
- 2 cups milk
- ½ tsp. vanilla flavoring
- ¼ tsp. almond flavoring
- 2 cups mixed fresh fruits and berries
- meringue crown of:
- 3 egg whites
- 6 tbsps. sugar

Mix sugar, salt and cornstarch, gradually add milk stirring until smooth. Cook in top of double boiler over hot water until thick. Beat egg yolks and add a little of the hot mixture to the yolks, stirring to prevent curdling. Then add to the hot mixture. Continue cooking until the mixture coats the spoon. Add flavoring. Cool. Pour into serving dish and stir in fruit. Chill. Top with meringue crown. Beat egg whites until stiff, but not dry. Gradually add sugar, beating constantly. Pile meringue in a ring on a greased pan. Place pan in a shallow pan of warm water. Bake at 300 degrees 20 minutes until light tan in color. Cool. Remove carefully from pan, using spatula or pancake turner. Place on top of pudding. Serves six.

A Word To The Wives

For a handsome fresh berry server, make a horn-of-plenty from a pineapple, using the bottom for the opening, and removing the pulp carefully. Leave the foliage on. Turn the pineapple on its side, enlarging the opening so as to display the berries which you pile inside.

Avocado is good combined with tart fruits for salad. Sprinkle some chopped nuts on top, or shredded coconut for something different.

For interest it is wise to remember to vary the texture as well as the color of the combinations. Something bland with something sharp. Something bright with something subdued in color. And if you are lucky enough to have some fresh mint growing in the backyard or a window box, a few leaves will set off the jewel colors of the fruits and berries.

Wine Makers Ask U. S. Ease Curb On Kosher Label

NEW YORK (JP) — Several wine manufacturers have asked the government to modify its present restrictions on the use of the "Kosher" label on wines.

The efforts to ease the present code came to light recently when an exchange of correspondence between the Federal Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Division and the Synagogue Council of America was disclosed. Government policy is to refuse the use of labels saying "Kosher Style" or "Kosher Type" unless the wine has been actually prepared kosher.

Dwight E. Avis, director of the division, notified the Synagogue Council of the requests, and said he thought the present restrictions should remain in force. The Synagogue Council agreed with Avis, saying that any other approach would confuse Orthodox Jews desiring to purchase wine for sacramental purposes.

Hurray For Pop!
He's A Good Guy

The mister is away on a trip this 19th day of June as I write and, among other things, he has missed out on the 16th birthday of his eldest who, as you can imagine, is ecstatic over his right to now get behind the wheel of the family car. At the other end of the line, 9-month-old Hermine had to choose this week with papa away to come through with tooth No. 1.

Since he isn't home and I can't wish him a happy Father's Day in person today, I'll take this opportunity to talk about him in his role of father.

THERE IS NO DOUBT that raising seven children in this highly complex civilization is no small job. I can insist that in the long run it is perhaps less difficult than trying to raise only one or two to adulthood. (In the shtetl, according to the book "Life Is With People," it was called "making children into people," a good enough definition of the job). And I'll insist further that children in a large family profit from and enjoy so many more experiences not given to those in small families. But my job still remains one that generally calls for overtime hours.

And if I were to name the one most important source of help

MUSIC AND DRAMA

IF THEATRE GROUPS ARE TO SUCCEED
THEY MUST PLAY THEIR ROLES—RIGHT

By JOSEPH GALE

The Jewish acting fraternity will set up two artistic camps, unconnected with each other, for presentation of Jewish plays in New York next season.

The Heritage Group Theater unit will offer recent Israeli productions and plays in English about American Jewish life. The other is a resuscitation of the famous Yiddish Art Theatre, with the veteran Maurice Schwartz active on all levels. The Heritage group will perform in the President Theater off Broadway, and remain there for the season. Schwartz and company will hold forth at the Downtown National Theater in the heart of the East Side, and plans, if successful, to tour the country.

Both will open in mid-October, the Heritage Group with "Highway Robbery," by Moshe Shami, an Israeli hit still playing after a year, and the Yiddish Art Theatre with a new play, "The Shepherd King," by L. Treister, with Edmund Zayenda, Miriam Kressyn and Menachim Rubin in the cast.

THE FINANCIAL benefactors of the uptown group are not known, but the Yiddish Art Theatre is eminently solvent, and proud of it. It is subsidized by a group of editors, journalists and representatives from cultural organizations and trade unions, among them the Jewish Labor Committee, joint board of the Amalgamated Union, Workmen's Circle, National Workers Alliance, International Ladies Garment Workers Union, Jewish DAILY FORWARD, and the Jewish DAY JOURNAL.

With this impressive line-up behind him, Schwartz will devote his time to acting, directing, and to refurbishing the name of a troupe which gave "Yoshe Kalb" to the world, "The Family Carnovsky," and "The Brothers Ashkenazi," and in which for 31 years he fulfilled the triple role of actor-manager-director. Four new musical plays in Yiddish will be presented next season, each for a six-week run. Sholom Secunda has been engaged to compose original music for the set.

NOW ALL THIS is heartening news, and blessings go to both families. Besides the initial requisite of adequate funds, each company, it seems to me, requires dissimilar conditions for lasting success. The Heritage Group, occupying a show house that has seen Israeli plays buried with faint praise, needs a couple of big hits—a second well-written play following hard on the first. The Yiddish Art Theatre needs most of all enthusiasm from the hinterlands, the centers of Jewish population where the Yiddish stage at its best is remembered with sadness and pride.

Subsidy itself is only part of the answer. It is much more important to their survival that the Schwartz company correctly analyze yesterday's cultural glory in terms of today, and that the Heritage Group divine the culture of today in terms of tomorrow.

DEATHS

Mrs. Miriam Hershman, 68, Detroit Leader Succumbs

DETROIT—Mrs. Miriam Lewin-Epstein Hershman, 68, whose funeral on June 13 marked the 46th anniversary of her marriage to Dr. Abraham M. Hershman, rabbi emeritus of Congregation Shaarey Zedek here, died June 10.

Carrying on the dream of her mother, Judith Lewin-Epstein, who was co-founder of national Hadassah, Mrs. Hershman co-founded the Detroit chapter of Hadassah and was one of its early presidents. She was also a member of the Shaarey Zedek sisterhood, the United Hebrew Schools and Jewish Home for Aged women's auxiliaries, and a score of cultural and philanthropic efforts.

Mrs. Hershman was born in Warsaw, but her father, one of the founders of the Rehovot settlement, took her to Palestine at the age of three. She remained there until she was 14. Until her death, she recalled her conversations with Dr. Theodor Herzl when he was a dinner guest in her parents' home in Rehovoth in 1899. Also until her death, she was concerned with publishing her father's remaining memoirs.

Morris Greenberg, 80

HARTFORD—Morris Greenberg, 80, a founder and charter member of Congregation Kneseth Israel and a member of the Barbour st. synagogue, Hebrew Home for Aged, and Deborah sanatorium, died June 5. Mr. Greenberg was a painter until

Pen Pals

The following Israelis would like to correspond with American boys and girls. Ten names will be printed weekly. Young readers of THE POST, who want to write to Israelis, and do not find the age or a name that attracts them, may write directly to The Post, Box 1633, Indianapolis post office. Names submitted this way will be printed in THE JERUSALEM POST, English language daily newspaper, by special arrangement, in the same manner as the names are printed below. A line or so about your hobbies or interests would be helpful.

Young Americans who receive interesting letters as they correspond with Israelis are invited to submit them to The Post. Those judged best will be printed in this column from time to time.

The following names have been supplied by Keren Hayesod:

Flori Zurishadai, 14, Beer Ya-cov, Israel.

Bilha Yavne, 14, 51 Menuha Venahia St., Rehovoth, Israel.

Ilana Yaari, 11, Kibbutz Alonim, Israel.

Aya Walsman, 11, 27 King George, Tel Aviv, Israel.

He was also a supporter of the YMHA, Miz-rachi, and B'nai B'rith.

Your Name

Want to know what your name means? Address your question to Mr. Pearlroth, National Jewish Post, Box 1633, Indianapolis 6, Indiana.

By N. PEARLROTH

DEAR MR. PEARLROTH: I would appreciate your giving me the meaning and derivation of my last name, which is Sherman. My grandfather came from Warsaw. — LINDA SHERMAN, Erie, Pa.

SHERMAN is a dealer in woolen cloth and is based on the fact that the cloth had to be cut with shears. (Scher). This is not to be confused with the name Sherer, which refers to a barber. There is also an English family name Sherman which is both popular and widespread. The English name has practically the same meaning as its Jewish counterpart, except that the English Sherman did not cut the cloth, but merely sheared the nap of the material.

DEAR MR. PEARLROTH: My name is Anolik; my parents are from Vilna, Lithuania. Could you give me the origin of my name. — CHARLES ANOLIK, Des Moines, Ia.

ANOLIK is a slightly garbled version of the Polish term "aniolek" (a little angel) used descriptively of the personal appearance of an individual. It may have been a nickname derived from the chubby, youthful or angelic appearance of the bearer. It may also mean that the original bearer of the name was a messenger or delegate (charged with a Palestinian charitable mission). The word "angel" in any language is literally "a messenger."

BOOKS

'THE LAST TEMPTATION' COULD'VE BEEN SOMETHING PRETTY GREAT

By MEYER LEVIN

THE LAST TEMPTATION, by Joseph Viertel. Simon and Schuster. $3.95.

As a book-club selection, this novel will reach a greater audience than any previous novel about Israel. This is important, for Viertel's story is one that will arouse sympathy and understanding in circles where Israel's problems may, before, have seemed to belong to "other kinds of people." The kinds of people in "The Last Temptation" are identifiable as nice people from nice middle-class families. They belong in the general stream of western fiction.

Deborah's folks were theatre-owners in Vienna. Her cousin Victor Marmorek, whom she marries, is the son of a Prague physician. And when the great troubles begin in the Thirties, Debbie's parents, right after the anchluss, manage to get the entire family safely to Prague. But her father goes back to clean up some business affairs, and her mother goes with him, and the family's one-time chauffeur, now a Nazi, kills them during an arrest.

HER BROTHER, early attracted to Zionism, had gone to Palestine and become a member of the Haganah co-operative. After years of tribulations, including the war-years in Italy during which Debbie accepts their Italian "protector" as a lover in order to keep him from betraying her and her husband as Jewish, the pair and their little son David finally board an illegal ship and reach Haifa.

In Jerusalem, Vic works for the British, in the telephone company. Vic has always been a man who "gets along," an organizer, a bit of a fixer. Now he gets along fine with the British.

He becomes friendly with his boss and too friendly, in secret, with his boss's wife. He also gets along with the Haganah. When the British leave Palestine, Vic is assigned by the Haganah to help build the Road of Courage. And one day he is taken from his task, hastily tried by a court-martial, and executed.

ONLY AFTER HIS DEATH, his wife learns that he had been accused of passing on to his British superiors a list that contained the addresses of new telephone installations in Jerusalem, including Haganah posts. The list had fallen into the hands of the Arabs, and the Arab mortar attack had zeroed in on the Haganah installations, nearly bringing the loss of Jerusalem.

With the aid of an American newspaperman, Debbie sets out to clear her husband's name. They obtain evidence that Vic did indeed pass on a general list to his British superior, but that it had no check-marks of the Haganah posts, and that in any case he knew his superior would not harm the Jews. But the list had then been stolen from the personal file of Vic's boss, it had been photographed, check-marked, and passed on to the Arab side. In a tense trial, in which the colonel who had Vic executed is accused of exceeding his authority, Vic's name is cleared. He made a bad mistake, but he was no traitor. And for the sake of the little boy, David, Vic is made a one-day hero by Ben-Gurion.

THE STORY will be recalled as a facsimile of an actual case; the trial of the hasty colonel, in Israel, attracted a great deal of attention in 1950. Viertel has used the material well, and has drawn from it an interesting portrait of the tragically over-adaptable Vic Marmorek, who would do anything at all to survive, to get along. However, he has told the story around the wife, rather than around the central character, Vic, so that the truly tense decisions and events are seen from the distance of her after-view, rather than from immediate involvement. Thus, Viertel gives us a splendid opportunity to project the Haganah activities in fighting for Jerusalem, to picture the hidden armories, the dreadful days when the mortars, seemingly at first by accident, began to strike these secret places, the tenuous days of shifting locations even while under attack. The frenzy that led to the abrupt court-martial is never fully pictured.

Instead, the novel is organized in terms of American readership, almost as though written for one of the better women's magazines. That it obtains such readership is fine. The material, however, could have served for a deeper novel, indeed for something pretty great.

THE EDITOR'S CHAIR

We recently had as a guest at our house for an evening a couple who were officially working for Israel in the United States helping to interest young people in going there.

Their approach was altogether different from that employed heretofore. They used no exhortation. If there was any urging at all, it was the subdued and subtle kind.

They merely answered questions, stimulated interest, planted seeds here and there, and retired. There was none of this obligation or duty sort of talk, and hardly any of self-fulfillment.

And even the answers to questions were as often discouraging as not.

BUT I DIDN'T want to tell you about this couple's approach or their methods. I wanted to talk about them.

They will forgive me if I say that for several weeks I was suspicious of them. Not that they were seeking to do anyone harm, but that they seemed to be setting themselves up as better than other people.

It took me sometime to unravel what was wrong with my reaction to them—just because I couldn't believe that they were as purely sincere as they seemed to be. I just couldn't bring myself to believe that there were people like them around any more.

IN OTHER WORDS, I wasn't able to put them into some kind of category. They couldn't be classed as social workers, they weren't shlichim (messengers sent by Israel to educate and lead other Jewish communities), they weren't anything that my mind could grasp and categorize.

I guess when the mind can't put someone new you meet into a category, it persists in being irritating, at least until it can finally be classified and thus dismissed.

Moved by events in the world, the couple had sold a successful business some years ago and decided to devote themselves to helping others. It was during the war, or just after it, and they went to Jewish agencies and offered their services free.

They were rejected, told that they weren't trained social workers. Finally they went to the Quakers, who greeted them with open arms, and sent them to Scandinavia.

AFTER THEIR reputation with the Quakers had spread, they still were more or less rebuffed by the Jewish organizations engaged in relief work.

So they turned to Israel, where they did such a fine job that they were finally sent back home to do the good work they are now doing.

All the time—and now too—they are working for nothing. I imagine their expenses are being paid, but I don't even know this for sure.

I HAVE never met anyone like this, and consequently at first I was inclined to suspect that the Jewish organizations which turned them down must have had some reason for it.

I now realize how unjust I was, and as I've shown, now understand why I reacted this way. They are so unusual, and I guess I'm so inured to everyone being grasping and self-seeking, that I couldn't believe the simple truth as they told it about themselves.

I thought you'd like to read about this refreshing couple, still in their early forties. And if you're inclined not to believe what you are reading, I'll understand why, because the same thing happened to me.

SOME OF OUR readers may be interested in the Israel Summer Institute which is sponsored every summer by the Jewish Agency. A student or teacher and others can spend July and August in Israel in a thrilling stay for only $795.00. This sum pays for round-trip transportation from New York, all meals and accommodations and of course travel. There is even a

In Fred Shochet's JEWISH FLORIDIAN, in the best tradition of the freedom of the press, the editor and a columnist argue the merits of Jewish support for Mt. Sinai Hospital, the Jewish hospital for Greater Miami.

The hospital is engaged in a $4 million expansion fund drive, and Harry Simonhoff, the columnist, presents the case against a Jewish hospital, while the paper, editorially advances the arguments, considerable as they are, for a Jewish hospital.

This is not a new problem, and most certainly The POST will not have the answer to the situation, where a Jewish community with declining or at least stationary income, takes on the annual financial burden which any first-rate hospital is bound to incur.

But the interesting aspect, to this paper, of the argument is that neither side took the position that the Jews owe it to the community to provide it with such a hospital. Of course, the editor pointed out the impact on general good will of the Jewish institution of healing, but neither he nor his adversary suggest that because other religious denominations had built hospitals in the area it was incumbent on the Jews to provide their share of hospital beds for the welfare of the general community.

This is maturity. Not so long ago the argument would have been that Jews owe this or owe that.

A HEALTHY SIGN

This false position was based on the premise that Jews are here by sufferance and that they have to prove their right to be here.

Today the Jews feel that as Americans they are contributing their share to the general weal, but they are doing this as a part of the citizenry, educated to the needs and to their responsibilities.

When the point is made that we owe something to the general community, this is assuming second-class citizenship. There are many things that Jews as Jews do for the welfare of the cities in which they live. They either do them as Jews, or as plain ordinary citizens. Which approach is best in 1955, we aren't prepared to say.

If a Littauer makes his contribution to higher education by gifts to Harvard university is that any better or worse than a gift to Brandeis university? In either way, the Jew is fulfilling his debt to higher education. Harvard, however, has a tremendous endowment, and Brandeis is struggling to put itself on a secure financial basis, so that gifts to Brandeis now are more urgent, but these gifts should be forthcoming not because Jews owe anything to higher education in the United States.

The Jews of Miami Beach will have to work out for themselves the problem which faces them, but it is a wholesome and healthy sign that they are not placing the argument pro and con on the false basis that Jews owe it to anyone.

THE TURNING TIDE

We hardly feel that the installation of the mechitzah—partition between men and women—at the Jewish Center of Hyde Park in Brooklyn—will set off any large wave of mechitzah construction within our Orthodox synagogues.

But it would be unwise to dismiss the phenomenon altogether.

It is a symptom of the same kind of return that has brought Reform closer to the center of Judaism, and moved Conservatism away from some errors that cannot be considered other than narrow escapes.

For a while Conservatism was flirting with the idea of approving non-kosher Jewish public banquets as long as there were no pork products or forbidden fish on the menu.

Reform's re-embracing of bar mitzva and re-emphasis on ritual are products of the same kind of emotion that led to the reintroduction of the mechitzah in the Brooklyn synagogue after 20 years of mixed seating.

This same attitude and approach will, we believe, move Reform to eschew pork and shrimp. Although Reform may not observe even the kashrut that the Conservatives follow, the movement will, in time, limit its eating to meats and fowl and fish that are considered "clean" by Jewish law.

Reader Calls Fluff Too Good to Miss

● Editor, JEWISH POST:

Some weeks ago I wrote, and you published, a letter from me describing what I didn't like about THE POST. It was not my intention to get involved in a long, although pleasant, scrap with your readers, columnists, and sundry innocent bystanders. I had my say; the others had their say, illogical as it might have been (you see, I'm completely objective about this), and I was ready to let the matter drop. But then you printed—or misprinted—something that was too good to overlook. So here I am again.

One of my original complaints was that your proofreading is abominable. Mrs. Lillian R. Zacks of Toronto, a loyal and charming reader, in commenting on that point wrote: "How perfect is reader Slavlin in things general?" That shouldn't be very hard for me to answer. I am probably a lousy proofreader. I can't sew a dress, bake a cake, fly an airplane, or fix a truck.

However, as though to prove my point, what I wrote about one of your columnists being dull as dishwater, you printed as "dull as a dishwasher," so that I got involved not only with THE POST, its columnists, and its devoted and articulate readers, but also with Spyros Axelrod of Local 163, Dishwashers and Kitchen Helpers union. For the record, I would like to assure Mr. Axelrod, publicly, that I would never dream of generalizing about dishwashers in this way. All my training and experience leads me to believe that dishwashers must vary from fascinating to dull, just as columnists, carpenters, cooks, chemists, and POST readers.

Incidentally, I am sure that columnist Wincelburg was not made unduly unhappy by my comments. "Better people should pan me than not mention me at all" is, I think, one of the axioms in that field. She used it to fill nearly half her column one week.

But the typesetter's booboo, the one that the proofreader overlooked, that really got me into this discussion again, was an item on Page 3 in the Mar. 25 issue. The heading said "Israeli Newspapers Welcome Dr. Schwartz," and it quoted DAVAR as referring to Schwartz as a "man who is the friend of the large Jewish masses in the United States." Male or female? I ask.

HERMAN SLAVIN.

Rambam's Identity Finally Revealed

● Editor, JEWISH POST:

Silly boy, don't you know who the Rambam is? (JP, May 20, '55).

Any high school boy will tell you that it is the name of a trained seal, caught under the Brooklyn bridge. The seal is famous for his Hassidic dancing done with a plate of matzot balanced on his head. His act was featured on television several times. You must have seen it. With the utmost respects,

HISTADRUT VIEW HELD VALID IN EPSTEIN FACTORY CASE

● Editor, JEWISH POST:

I am saddened by the news about Al Epstein and his factory (JP, May 20, '55).

First, may I through your columns let Epstein know how much I appreciate his efforts in behalf of the state of Israel... I've silently applauded him for years. I liked reading his column in the LOS ANGELES JEWISH VOICE, whereby I knew his trials and tribulations in his Israel manufacturing venture, and also his satisfactions.

Second, I know his efforts have been most worthy and have contributed much to Israel.

Third, I feel certain Epstein will not be bitter over his having to close out his business. From his VOICE columns one got the feeling Mr. Epstein is no tyro, but a pioneer of pioneers... even when temporary defeat touches him.

Thank you, Mr. Epstein. You have succeeded. You have pioneered for others of us.

Knowing the grand and great history of the Histadrut movement, one must understand their apparent intransigence.

The Histadrut members would not amount to much if they did not bend every effort to fulfill their more than 50 years' dream of Socialism. In the name of, and in an almost unendurable effort toward a Socialist Israel, the Histadrut men and women have planned, plowed, fought, bled and died.

However we may view the political implications, must we not, in fairness, admit the validity of the Histadrut thesis? If we admit the validity of the thesis and then a capitalist or free-enterprise manufacturing effort shows it can succeed what becomes of the dialectical situation?

A reappraisal is in order, is it not?

Mrs. MARY BOLOTIN.

U.S. - ISRAEL ALLIANCE HELD TO BLOCK ISRAEL'S NEEDS

Editor, JEWISH POST:

World events in the past few years have shown that Russia is vulnerable in the political realm. A case in point is Russia's relations with Yugoslavia. A few years ago, she and Yugoslavia were at odds with each other. Today, Russia is wooing Yugoslavia most intensely.

Changes in political conditions have been responsible for Russia's reversal of her former position. Jews must take to heart this much-needed lesson.

As yet, Russia has given very little indication of letting Russian Jewry emigrate to Israel. It is true that some Russian Jews have been allowed to leave Russia for Israel. However, there is as yet no tangible sign of a mass emigration.

The reason is obvious. Russia is in a dilemma. She does not know, as yet, what her position on Israel and world Jewry is.

This was not always so. In the 30s, Russia was decidedly anti-Zionist and somewhat anti-Jewish. In the 40s, as a result of her war experiences, Russia's position on Jewry underwent some changes. Many Jews destined for the concentration camps were saved by the Russian army. The past few years, Russia's policy has vacillated. At times, she was pro-Israel; at other times, she was not.

Russia's attitude toward Israel and world Jewry in the future will be influenced by world events. Primarily, it will be affected by Israel's attitude toward Russia. Here, Israel must adopt an Israeli policy in consonance with its national interests. A good example is Yugoslavia, which follows its own independent policy. Israel could well emulate this European power.

Some American Jewish leaders should quit advocating a U.S.-Israel defense alliance. It would be tantamount to killing off all chances of Russian Jewry emigration to Israel. The American leaders, in fact all American Jewry, should accept the fact that Israel should pursue her own policy, even if that policy happens at times to clash with American and/or American Jewish interests.

American Jews should appeal to Russia, however, to let Russian Jews emigrate to Israel. In this noble enterprise, American Jews should be led by their leaders, the rabbis. The various rabbinical organizations (Orthodox, Conservative and Reform) in co-operation with each other, should conduct an open and direct campaign to persuade Russia to let Russian Jewry emigrate to Israel. There should be appeals to all of Russia's top leaders.

SAMUEL DYEN.

New York.

Post Headline Seen Incorrect

Editor, JEWISH POST:

In the interest of accurate reporting, I would protest against the caption: "Marriage of Jewess, Negro Gets Rabbinical Body's O.K." in the May 27 POST.

The fact that you refer in the opening sentence to the "responsa committee of the Central Conference of American Rabbis (CCAR)" does not, in my opinion, justify the inaccuracy of the heading. A committee or a chairman of a committee is not a rabbinical body. When we refer to a "rabbinical body" we have in mind the CCAR, RCA or RAA as a whole. Many of your readers who may not have read beyond the headline might well have received a false impression.

I am not here questioning the opinion of the chairman and/or responsa committee in regard to the matter described. My appeal is only for more accurate reporting. A better and more accurate caption would have been: "Marriage Of Jewess, Converted Negro Gets (Given) O.K."

Incidentally, since The POST appeared under dateline of May 27 (Shavuot) I should have imagined that an editorial on the significance of the festival would have been in order, or, at least, the word "Shavuot" would have appeared somewhere in the paper.

SOME JEWS ACTIVELY OPPOSE DESEGREGATION: FEIBLEMAN

ASBURY PARK, N. J. (JP)—Admission that some Southern Jews have joined citizens committees opposing implementation of the desegregation decision of the Supreme Court was made here by Rabbi Julian B. Feibleman.

The New Orleans rabbi told the Reform convention here that this phenomenon could be explained by the fact that those Jews who have lived long enough in rural sections have taken on the coloration of the stronger group.

Rabbi Feibleman, whose own opposition to segregation is clear, said he would not "tell any rabbi what he must do or what he ought to do."

He read from a letter he received from a Southern rabbi who he said wrote:

"I THINK that a rabbi in the Deep South, especially in areas where the Negro population is very large, can do irreparable damage to his Jewish community if he were to wage the battle of integration alone—and he would definitely be alone. He would do more harm than good. However, he should not keep silent."

Rabbi Feibleman said that "congregations do not feel that their rabbis should be either a crusader or a leader in opposing segregation or upholding integration."

A solution could be found, Rabbi Feibleman felt, if the dominant religious groups in the South come out firmly for desegregation. He said this they had failed to do.

HE QUOTED from a letter from another Southern rabbi, who wrote that he had members, and other communities, not far distant, had many Jews, who firmly believed the Negro must remain a second-class citizen. Rabbi Feibleman said this rabbi refuses, as he had done in other parts of the country, to take the leadership in race relations on the ground that if dominant groups fail to, such a position is futile.

Rabbi Edward E. Klein, of New York, speaking at the same session, said rabbis should invite Negro leaders to occupy their pulpits from time to time and that Jewish children and young people should meet in intergroup projects with Negroes of all ages.

No UN Council Meeting Seen Needed In 'Frisco

SAN FRANCISCO (JP)—Diplomatic sources now believe the Israel-Egypt border conflict has cooled off enough so that no United Nations Security Council meeting will be necessary here.

Khalid El-Azem, Syrian foreign minister, the only speaker so far who has tried to inject specific political issues into remarks contrary to the ground rules of the commemorative session, was halted by Eelco van Kleffens, of The Netherlands, president of the meeting.

El-Azem, when demanding Arab liberation of North Africa, also denounced colonial imperialism and "that Zionist offshoot of imperialism planted and fostered by it," obviously referring to Israel.

HIAS To Bring Needy Greek Jews To United States

NEW YORK (JP)—Survivors of Nazi war-time cruelties in Greece are still in a "deplorable state," said Ben Touster, president of United HIAS Service, in announcing an emergency program to effect their emigration to the United States.

Touster said many Greek Jews were living in houses without roofs and in tents.

Preference will be shown to the Jews in Volos, which suffered the full force of the recent earthquake. Touster said that the agency office in Athens had petitioned the U. S. Consul to grant priority to 100 Volos residents who had registered for immigration. He said he hoped that the applicants would qualify under the Refugee Relief Act of 1955.

Edward Norman, Financier, Dies

NEW CANAAN, Conn.—Edward A. Norman, prominent Jewish financier and philanthropist died June 20 here at the home of a friend.

Mr. Norman, 55, was chief founder and president of the American Fund for Israel Institutions. Many of his interests were directed towards the building up of Israel, although he was not a Zionist. He was secretary of the American Jewish Committee.

FEINBERG SEES U. S. JUDAISM AS 'FOLKISM GONE BERSERK'

ASBURY PARK, N. J. (JP)—Modern American Judaism was described as "folkism gone berserk," before the Reform rabbi's meeting in annual convention here.

In a slashing attack, Rabbi Abraham Feinberg, of Toronto, charged that the "Temple moves closer to the Conservative synagogue and it inches toward left-wing Orthodoxy—and all gradually drift into a common denominator of ideological unconcern."

Rabbi Feinberg, to buttress his argument, quoted Rabbi Solomon B. Freehof as asserting that "Conservatism is Reform in practice, but Orthodoxy in theory."

HE SAID this "enables thousands of young married couples in America to select their synagogue on grounds of simple convenience—geographical, social or personal."

Rabbi Feinberg urged Reform to hew "militantly to its individuality rather than (to be) a catch-all modulating to the temporary fever of romantic neo-Orthodoxy. The price of adherence for many converts to Reform is a yarmulke. Though not a concession of intrinsic import, in principle it arouses suspicion that the growth in our membership may eventually be recorded as a pyrrhic victory."

Bristling with pungent phrases, the talk condemned the 'so-called "Torah-true" synagogue' which it said was "a show-piece appendage to banquet-hall and kitchen." It added that "very few members of any group—Orthodox, Conservative or Reform—know what or why they believe . . ."

REFORM WAS described as drawing "its contemporary strength from the dead shtetl," as compared to "dynamic Israel, which promises freedom, and the democratic soil of America, which underscores faith."

Rabbi Feinberg was optimistic about Israel and saw in the "synthesis of Israel and diaspora . . . a venture toward world moral leadership."

THE RETURN to heavy emphasis on ritual came in for strong attack by the Canadian rabbi. He urged that "ritual practice must be identified with basic ideas to acquire purpose, meaning and permanence. He said that a synthesis of reason and ritual will graduate ritual "from gimmick and gadget to a steady, sustaining, evolving growth in the soil of human need."

At another, Dr. Feinberg urged reform to drive for the spreading of personal prayer.

"Our period in Jewish history has the distinction of being the first to try to live without private prayer." He said: "Reform . . . stirs restlessly on the threshold of the most delicate transition it has yet undertaken—the attempt to recover . . . 'the power to pray'."

ORTHODOXY TO SUBURBS AIRED BY RABBI HOLLANDER

By ALAN KOHN

Jewish Post Correspondent

NEW YORK (JP)—Rabbi David Hollander of the Rabbinical Council of America outlined a plan to bring Orthodoxy to new suburban communities, at a meeting of Orthodox lay organizations recently.

To help establish Orthodox synagogues, Rabbi Hollander suggested that trained personnel and funds (loans) be made available. The funds of old synagogues and landmanschaften which have ceased to exist was one source of money mentioned.

Rabbi Hollander also said that he hoped a legal department would be started immediately to look into the possibility of the monetary aid and to provide legal aid in preventing Orthodox congregations from leaving Orthodoxy. The New York department of state and the attorney-general have already been contacted on the possibility, The POST learned.

Other statements by Rabbi Hollander included his expectation that any new synagogue which got Orthodox funds would conform to Orthodox standards and his feeling that safeguards must be set up.

Among those who heard the rabbi were representatives of the Mizrahi organization, Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations and its women's branch, Hapoel Hamizrachi, Agudath Israel, Poalei Agudath Israel, and the National Council of Young Israel.

Commenting on the group's plan to ask more representatives of Orthodoxy to attend the next meeting, Rabbi Chaim Lipschitz of the Rabbinical Alliance of America told THE POST that he was wholeheartedly in favor of the move to strengthen Orthodoxy and would be happy to attend that meeting.
